

Micromax casts eyes abroad as home market worsens

■ Micromax sells about 3 million devices a month and is ranked just tenth in sales worldwide

June 3

MICROMAX Informatics has become the latest Asian smartphone company to broadcast its global ambitions. The Indian company known for cut-rate phones and a frenetic pace of new-model launches is evaluating an entry into several overseas markets including China, en route to becoming a top-five player internationally.

While India's smartphone market remains relatively under-penetrated, Micromax co-founder Vikas Jain said prices were "headed south" because of an influx of foreign competition. But it's sticking to its plan of becoming one of the world's five biggest sellers - a goal that would entail a presence in major markets like China.

Smartphone sales are sputtering even as Asia's largest brands, from Huawei Technologies to Xiaomi Corp, narrow the gap with Apple and Samsung Electronics. Just this week, Huawei said it hoped to unseat the dominant players within five years. Micromax, No. 3 in Russia currently, has considered markets like Indonesia and even the United States in the past but hasn't made that much headway beyond India.

"We do keep evaluating about two to three international markets. Not to say we're definitely going to launch in any of the three," Jain, one of Micromax's four founders, told Bloomberg Television. "If we have a vision of being in the top five, we can't be ignoring the China market."

"Sooner or later, we should see a presence in the China market."

Replicating the expansive distribution network it employs in India will be a challenge. Micromax, which sells about 3 million devices a month and is ranked just 10th in sales worldwide, shot to prominence by selling cheap phones from the shopping malls of India's biggest cities to the street corners of its smallest towns. But the company recently weathered the departure of several top managers, including chief executive officer Vineet Taneja, as intensifying competition squeezed margins.

Phone makers - including Apple are increasingly focusing on India with markets like the US and China plateauing. Micromax already trails Samsung and is now trying to fend off Chinese players from Xiaomi to Huawei and Oppo.

Those companies are trotting out inexpensive models aimed at the very segments Micromax targets. While still number two in India, the Indian company's shipments fell more than 20% in 2015 while Lenovo's, for instance, climbed almost 60 percent, according to researcher Canalis.

Still, Jain stresses the market's "phenomenal" potential. Smartphone sales had room to double from current levels, even if that free-for-all is depressing prices, he said. Micromax's approach has been to flood the zone with phones, giving consumers "multiple options" to switch from other brands: in April, it introduced 15 models in a single day. Last year, it began selling an $11 phone in a pouch - just like the shampoo and toothpaste sachets that India's middle-class buy and discard.

"The industry should be selling more than 500 million mobile phones, and we still sell only 250 million," he said. "The life cycle has shrunk to less than 15 months now."

Longer term, Micromax - backed by influential US venture firm Sequoia Capital - is trying to build software services to enhance the appeal of its hardware. It will continue to localize production, moving beyond mere assembly while working on what it hopes will be its next big devices. The country is pushing phone makers to move manufacturing operations from China, to align with its "Make in India" program.

"There are a few projects that the team is working on that we really feel should be the differentiator," Jain said, refusing to be drawn on details. "I'm sure that it will really make a change in the way mobile phones are looked at and used."

MS eyes Indian developers for cross-platform apps

fe Bureau

Pune, June 3: The most recent version of the Microsoft operating system, Windows 10, is receiving better response from the market than its predecessors. According to Jeffrey Burtoft, senior program manager, Developer Experience, Microsoft US, Windows 10 has got 270 million customers in its first year.

Burtoft was in Pune on Friday to speak to developers at the Microsoft Build Developer conference and get the developers to use Windows to build apps not only for Windows but also for iOS and Android. Getting its Windows strategy right is a key part of Microsoft's plans to stay relevant in a mobile-centric world where rivals like Amazon.com, Apple and Google are more influential with many consumers and developers.

According to developers at the conference, one reason for the rapid uptake of Windows 10, released in July last year, is free for individual consumers who download it during its first year. Enterprise customers have to pay for Windows 10. "An anniversary upgrade to be released this summer will also be free for users already running Windows 10, Burtoft said.

Developers have been saying that Microsoft's main problem with that the range of apps that work on Windows mobile devices lagged behind those on Android and iOS, making them less attractive.

Around 600 developers participated at the event that showcased various apps in the augmented-reality, Internet of Things and tried to synchronize the apps across various devices such as Xbox, Raspberry, laptops, phone and also on Android phones. With the acquisition of Xamarin, Microsoft is trying to bring in iOS and Android developers on Windows network helping them to integrate them on across platforms increasing their customer base. The company gave an update on its HoloLens augmented-reality technology, which ships to developers soon.

According to developers at the conference, one reason for the rapid uptake of Windows 10, released in July last year, is free for individual consumers who download it during its

DMRC inks PPA with Madhya Pradesh firm

Bhopal, June 3: The Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) has signed a power purchase agreement (PPA) with Madhya Pradesh's Rewa Ultra Mega Solar (RUMSL) to get green power from the latter to run its trains in the national capital.

Managing director of DMRC Mangu Singh inked PPA with MP New and Renewable Energy Department principal secretary Manu Shrivastava on behalf of RUMSL in Delhi on Thursday. DMRC will get 150 to 200 MW green power daily from RUMSL from next year, Shrivastava told PTI.

RUMSL is raising the world's largest solar power station of 750 Mega Watt (MW) in Rewa district and its three units of 250 MW each are expected to go on steam by June, 2017, he said.

Significantly, the development has come at a time when the Delhi government is battling to arrest pollution levels in the national capital, which is one of the world's most polluted cities, and even experimented the 'odd-even' number scheme to limit vehicular traffic - a major pollutant.

The Solar Energy Corporation of India and Madhya Pradesh Urja Vikas Nigam (MPUVN) have joined hands to facilitate setting up of the green power station, christened RUMSL, on 1,500 hectares area at Bandwar region in Gudh tehsil of Rewa district, said Shrivastava, who is also the managing Director of MPUVN.
